

The observed sample is one of the potential random samples we could have drawn from the population.

We resample n observations from the observed sample, computing the resampled mean for each of them.

